OUR SPEAKER: JEFF MURRAH

Jeff Murrah

As a sixth-generation Texan, Jeffrey Murrah grew up surrounded by history and heritage. His fascination with the history and people of Texas is reflected in his work as a counselor and in his books. His first book, None but Texians: A History of Terry's Texas Rangers, took him ten years to write and later earned him the 2002 Summerfield G. Roberts Award for the best book on Texas and Texans during the Civil War. It is considered a "must-read" by many re-enactors. His upcoming book, Texans Always Move Them: A True History of Texas, is to be published later this year. The writing of this book has taken him five years and travel through four countries. It promises to be another important contribution to the culture and history of Texas.

In addition to writing, Jeff's public speaking, dating from his teaching days as a professor at San Jacinto College, always provides thought-provoking and informative evenings for his audiences. In addition to his writing and speaking, Jeff has worked alongside historians, re-enactors, teachers, and politicians in preserving the heritage of Texas. He is a member of the Sons of Confederate Veterans as well as Texas State Chairman of the League of the South and was recently commissioned an Admiral in the Texas Navy by Governor Rick Perry. Jeff can be reached through the following website: www.RestoreTheFamily.com.

Jeff's topic for the evening, "Governor Pendleton Murrah: Standing on Confederate Principles," addresses the life and times of this wartime Governor of Texas.

Make your reservations by Monday, February 12 and join us for a most informative Thursday evening with Jeff!

QUIZ QUESTION by Jim Godlove

On March 16, 1861, the Texas secession convention summoned the state's governor before he was to take the oath of allegiance to the Confederacy. When the governor failed to appear, his office was declared vacant and the lieutenant governor was sworn in as governor. Who was this gentleman who had run on a unionist platform in 1859?

HCWRT'S EXPRESSION OF CONDOLENCES TO TWO OF OUR MEMBERS

Members, officers, and directors of the Round Table were saddened to receive news this month of the passing of former HCWRT member Elizabeth Lewis, who, along with her husband Norman, was a longtime supporter of our organization. Elizabeth was a presenter at one of our past chapter meetings, and she will be remembered and honored for that as well as for the disciplined research she undertook in the publishing of her Civil War book Queen of the Confederacy in 2002.

We also express our sympathies to HCWRT member J. Fred Duckett on the loss of his wife Baudine on January 23rd. Fred as well has been a long-time supporter of our Round Table and an appreciated history aficionado. Baudine will be remembered for many things, among them her many contributions to foreign students at Rice University down through the years.

BATTLE OF THE BEES – APRIL 3, 1864

One of the oddest confrontations of the Civil War occurred on April 3, 1864, when three determined combatants were pitted against one another—Union troops, Confederate fighters, and a swarm of angry honeybees!

The skirmish is commemorated by an historical marker about a mile north of present-day Okolona, Arkansas and is considered part of the Red River Campaign. Near this site, Confederate General

Joseph Shelby caught up with General Samuel Rice's Union troops and gave battle in a pecan orchard during a severe thunderstorm. Along with the other damage due to hail and high winds, several beehives were overturned. First attacking the Confederates, the bees then unleashed their fury on the Union Army, whereupon both armies vacated the field, leaving the swarming honeybees the undisputed winners of the day's engagement!

After their hasty exits from the pecan grove, the two primary combatants met again the following day on April 4, at Elkins' Ferry on the Little Missouri River before they waged a decisive battle April 9-12 at Prairie de Ann near present-day Prescott. There the Union forces were turned away from their target—old Washington, the Confederate capital of Arkansas and Missouri.

Steele proceeded to Camden but then headed back north to Little Rock, abandoning his southern campaign for the duration of the war.

DID YOU KNOW THAT?

There is a Civil War Round Table chapter in Melbourne, Australia? Sure enough, the American Civil War Round Table of Australia publishes its Minie News from Melbourne approximately five times per year, and our newsletter editor Karen Stone has printed up about a dozen copies of the January, 2007 issue for those of you who might like to see what these enterprising Aussies are doing in their intriguing and very thorough research of this conflict.

The link between the Confederacy and Australia was apparently sealed when the C.S.S. "Shenandoah" visited Melbourne in January-February, 1865. Also, according to Barry Crompton of the ACWRT, who, in quoting the author of "Coal: a Human History," by Barbara Freese, suggests that one of the prime reasons the "Shenandoah" was out on the high seas at that time was to clean out the Union whale fishing vessels which provided factories and homes with whale oil, in those days a major source of lighting fuel. Mr. Crompton goes on to say that gas made from coal and kerosene at or about this time became the main source of light for consumers and in the process led to the end of the use of sperm whale oil, the very product the officers and crew of the "Shenandoah" were targeting when engaging the enemy on the high seas.

THE MARINERS' MUSEUM: THE USS MONITOR CENTER IN NEWPORT NEWS OPENS ON MARCH 9, 2007

That's right! After a delay of approximately one hundred and forty-five years, the Mariners' Museum and its partners at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administrations (NOAA) and the National Marine Sanctuaries Program will soon open the new $30 million USS Monitor Center in Newport News, Virginia. The facility promises to be state-of-the-art in every way and will house the Monitor's famous gun turret and recovered artifacts, in addition to guiding visitors on an exciting, interactive journey as they learn the Monitor's story—about the people who lived and died on her as well as those who worked on her recovery years later.

For further information about the opening events, please call (757) 596-2222 or visit the website, www.MarinersMuseum.org.

TWO CIVIL WAR MUSEUMS OF INTEREST by Charlie Mitchell

The Texas Civil War Museum in Fort Worth contains both private collections of Civil War artifacts and a collection in public trust. These combined collections make this the largest Civil War museum west of the Mississippi River.

The museum houses three very fine collections, a theatre, and a gift shop. More than 3,000 artifacts and some 60 flags are on rotating display there.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy—Texas Confederate Collection—on display at the museum, contains articles from the home front and places emphasis on the Texas soldier.

The museum is located at 760 Jim Wright Freeway North, Fort Worth, Texas 76108. The telephone number is (817) 246-2323. The hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 9:00 AM to 5:00 PM. Note the closures on New Year's Day, July 4, Thanksgiving, Christmas Eve, and Christmas Day.

On the West Side of Fort Worth!

The Navarro College Pearce Civil War Museum is located in Corsicana, Texas and is housed on the campus of Navarro College. The Pearce Civil War Museum is the life-long collection of Charles S. Pearce. The exhibits contain over 7,000 items housed in the Navarro College Archives and facilitate research on all aspects of the United States Civil War.

The collection includes a limited number of antebellum and Reconstruction materials representing both the North and the South during the Civil War.

In addition to the Civil War museum, the building showcases the Pearce Western Art Collection, an extensive display of western art from a number of painters focusing on this genre of American art.

The museum is located at 3100 W. Collin Street, Corsicana, TX 75110. The phone number is (903) 875-7438 or (800) 988-5317.

If you are interested in exploring museums, I recommend these two to you. You don't have to travel very far from home for this worthwhile investment of your time and can probably manage to tour them both in just one day!
